

Memphis Area Customized Dangerous Goods Training

Do you own a company which ships consumer commodity products? Do you mail holiday or birthday presents? Do you sell products online on e-commerce sites? Do you ship packages via transportation companies such as FedEx? If the answer is yes, then you must determine if the products you are shipping are considered dangerous goods.

What is a Dangerous Goods?

Dangerous Goods (DG) are articles or substances capable of posing a risk to health, safety, property, or the environment when transported by air. Dangerous Goods are sometimes referred to as Hazardous Materials (HM).

Correctly identifying a DG commodity and preparing it for air transport as required by all applicable DG regulations is crucial to ensuring DG shipments move safely through the FedEx air network.

US and International dangerous goods regulations require any person employed on a full-time, part time, or temporary basis who in the course of such employment directly affects dangerous goods transportation safety must receive function specific training in accordance with all applicable DG regulations.

The FedEx public DG seminars assist companies satisfy this training requirement. In addition to our public seminars, FedEx also offers customized DG training courses designed to meet your organization's needs.
